

About Greeninfo Network

[00:00:01.46] GreenInfo Network is a nonprofit founded in 1996. There are around two dozen of us staff, and we work for a wide range of organizations all over the US, but mostly, in California. In more than two decades, GreenInfo Network has supported over 1,000 public interest organizations and agencies with a wide range of information technology. To enable these groups to better meet their environmental, conservation, public health, social justice, and other goals.

[00:00:35.50] As you may know, GreenInfo Network is the publisher of the California Protected Areas Database, CPAD and the California Conservation Easement Database, CCED. And we've been working on these databases for quite some time. They formed the foundation of a lot of what we do here.

[00:00:55.89] I'll also note that there are several ways to check in on our work. We have a blog sorted by our Executive Director, Dan Rademacher. An Instagram feed for those interested in cartography and graphic design. You can find us on Twitter. And to learn more about the organization and projects we've been working on, visit greeninfo.org. Thank you and we encourage you to continue exploring our video series.
